EXPLANATION.

---

The General Statutes of 1866 is the last state revision of the laws. All laws of a general nature passed since that revision, and now in force, will be found in this compilation. The notes under the sections state the law which enacted them, and all prior laws upon that subject, and the changes which the laws have made. When the section is from the General Statutes of 1866, that is cited; but, in order to preserve the identity of prior references and citations, the section numbers of the General Statutes of 1878 are also added in parentheses; hence the reference in such cases appears: "G. S. ch. 2, § 3 (4)."

When the section is that of a law enacted since the revision of 1866, and not an amendment of that revision, the year, the chapter and section are cited, and, in order to conform to the Constitution, the title and date of approval of the act are also given under its first section.

In consequence of the Probate and Penal Code expunging certain chapters of the General Statutes as amended, the chapter numbering of that revision could not be followed.

The classification of the matter in each chapter under the heads where the subject-matter belongs, so that the subject would not be in different places in the same chapter, prevented the consecutive order of the section numbering in the General Statutes from being followed in all cases.

The first volume presents the police and fiscal powers, and could properly be designated the Political Code or division. From the beginning of the second volume until the Probate Code is reached is the civil or remedial. Then follows the Probate Code, the Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure. Hence the five codes are presented in this compilation in proper divisions, order and classification wanting only the name.

Every change assumed in arrangement or classification is that adopted by the best state revisions and compilations.

STATE OF MINNESOTA.

Office of State Librarian.

ST. PAUL, November 19, 1890.

JNO. F. KELLY, Esq.:

Dear Sir — I have carefully examined and compared your compilation of the General Statutes of Minnesota, and do most cheerfully certify that it is a true, correct and authentic compilation of all the laws now in force. In my humble estimation, it is the most satisfactory, the best arranged and the most accurate statutes the State has ever had.

Very respectfully,

WM. H. H. TAYLOR,

State Librarian.
